Our pursuit of excellence

As Sirromet Wines and Restaurant Lurleen's are world-class facilities, it follows that all team members should aspire to become world-class professionals in their chosen vocation.

Management is committed to providing the training and the resources necessary to enable all team members who share our ideals and vision to become acknowledged industry leaders.

Obviously as our success continues, our team members will become highly sought after for they will have earned the right to be viewed as true professionals by their peers. Those who succeed will be able to prove by their deeds and achievements that they are capable of rising above mediocrity to become the best in their chosen field and recognised as outstanding members of our team.

To reach the pinnacle of success will mean a commitment of time and mental energy. It will mean a change of attitude. You will continually strive for perfection. You will read and study to learn how the best in the world perform and your desire and goal will be to be as good, if not better, than they are.

To start, you need to look inside yourself and ask, "Do I want to become the best at what I do?" If you are prepared to make that commitment, we will provide the training and the resources needed.

This will not happen overnight but if we commit to our common goal we will succeed.

I believe that the rewards you receive from the pursuit of excellence are far greater than one can imagine at the start of the journey.

Individuals who do not share our goals will not have a long-term future with us. They will be replaced by others who want something more than mediocrity out of life.

Naturally as we achieve success, our business will also succeed making it possible for us to financially reward our first class team members.

Your team leader will be discussing with you how you can participate. We will also understand that you may choose not to become involved. After all, not everyone marches to the same drumbeat, not everyone aspires to be an Olympic Champion.

If you do commit to joining our pursuit of excellence, we confirm our total support in assisting you achieve your goals. We look forward to sharing this exciting journey and your vision and goals with you.
